Shaping the Future of Creative Entrepreneurship: BuSYouth Final Conference

Sivitanidios School of Trades and Vocations hosted the Final Conference

We are delighted to share the highlights from the final conference of our Erasmus+ KA2 project focusing on developing skills for young people aiming to become successful freelancers in the Cultural and Creative Industries (CCI). The project aimed to develop and promote training programs, open resources, and e-tools for the development of business skills in young people that wish to be involved in the CCI sector implementing foundational business skills education and networking activities.

Conference highlights: a resounding success

The final conference brought together almost 200 participants from various professional backgrounds, including trainees of the Higher Vocational Training Institutes, freelance professionals, experienced trainers, and teachers from different educational levels, artists, University Students of Culture and Media (Panteion Panepistimion) and colleagues from schools and educational institutes from all over Greece (Sterea Ellada, Peloponnesus etc.).

Their collective engagement, practical experience, and shared insights contributed significantly to the dynamic and enriching atmosphere of the event.

Participants shared overwhelmingly positive feedback about the recent conference, praising its strong relevance, seamless organization, and the rich opportunities it offered for meaningful exchange. The innovative outcomes presented from the CCI project were particularly well received, with many attendees noting their immediate applicability to their own professional work.

The interactive format and the diversity of perspectives among participants fostered a dynamic, collaborative learning environment, both inspiring and energizing. Overall, the conference delivered significant value and left participants motivated and enriched by the experience.
